RE: Entry Level Epidemiologist

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my enthusiasm for the Entry Level Epidemiologist position at Acme Corporation, which I discovered on your careers page. With a solid foundation in public health and a keen interest in epidemiological research, I am eager to contribute to your team and aid in the development of effective health policies and programs.

During my time at the University of Public Health, I successfully conducted a research project analyzing the correlation between vaccination rates and the incidence of preventable diseases in urban populations. This project not only honed my analytical skills but also resulted in a presentation at the National Public Health Conference, where I communicated my findings to a diverse audience of professionals. Additionally, I completed an internship with the State Department of Health, where I assisted in the epidemiological surveillance of infectious diseases. My work involved data collection, analysis, and the preparation of reports that informed local health initiatives, which reinforced my ability to work with statistical software and effectively communicate complex data.

I am excited about the opportunity to bring my background in data analysis and research to the team at Acme Corporation. I am particularly drawn to your commitment to innovative public health solutions and would welcome the chance to contribute to projects aimed at improving community health outcomes. I would love the opportunity to discuss how my skills and experiences align with the goals of your organization. Thank you for considering my application, and I look forward to the possibility of speaking with you further.

Sincerely,

Jessica A. Thompson
