

Emily Johnson

January 16, 2026

Acme Corporation

RE: History Teacher

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am excited to apply for the History Teacher position at Acme Corporation, as advertised on your website. With a passion for imparting knowledge and fostering a love for history in students, I believe that my teaching philosophy aligns perfectly with the values of your institution. I am eager to bring my expertise and innovative teaching methods to your school community.

In my previous role at Lincoln High School, I successfully revamped the U.S. History curriculum to incorporate project-based learning, which increased student engagement by 30% as measured by participation rates during class discussions and collaborative projects. Additionally, I implemented a digital storytelling project that allowed students to create their own historical narratives using multimedia tools, resulting in several students receiving local awards for their presentations. This approach not only enhanced their understanding of historical events but also developed their critical thinking and creative skills.

Furthermore, I am proud to have led a professional development workshop for fellow teachers focused on integrating technology into history lessons. This initiative provided educators with the tools to enhance their teaching strategies, fostering a collaborative environment that ultimately benefited our students' learning experiences. I am committed to continuously improving my teaching practice and sharing knowledge with colleagues to cultivate a thriving educational environment.

I am very interested in the opportunity to further discuss how my background, skills, and enthusiasms align with the needs of your school. Thank you for considering my application. I look forward to the possibility of contributing to the history program at Acme Corporation.

Sincerely,

Emily Johnson