

Jordan Taylor

January 16, 2026

Acme Corporation

RE: No Experience Ironworker

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my excitement about the No Experience Ironworker position listed on your company's careers page. With a strong desire to start my career in the construction industry and a commitment to learning, I am eager to contribute to Acme Corporation's projects and growth.

Even though I do not have previous experience as an ironworker, I have worked in physically demanding roles that required strength, attention to detail, and teamwork. For instance, during my time as a warehouse associate, I successfully managed the loading and unloading of heavy materials, ensuring the safe and efficient handling of products. This experience taught me the importance of following safety protocols and developing effective communication skills with my team, which I know are vital in the ironworking field. Additionally, I have completed a basic welding course, where I gained foundational skills and knowledge about metal fabrication and construction techniques. This has provided me with a solid understanding of materials and tools used in the industry.

I am very interested in the opportunity to join Acme Corporation and contribute to your team while continuing to learn from experienced professionals. I am confident that my strong work ethic, eagerness to learn, and dedication to safety will allow me to succeed in this role. I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss my application in more detail and explore how I can contribute to the success of your projects. Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,

Jordan Taylor